Real Estate Investment Trust ("REITs") hold many benefits to the overall economic development of a country especially for developing economies like China, India and Philippines where REITs free up capital for real estate and infrastructure, attracting long-term investors such as sovereign wealth funds, pension funds and insurance companies. Investors are also showing a preference for REITs that are able to not only manage their risks to weather economic uncertainty, but also those that are able to optimise value from their portfolios either via organic growth (rental rate growth) or inorganic growth (asset enhancement initiatives and/or acquisitions). We believe REITs offers an attractive yield will still be in demand for long term investors and those who are looking for attractive yields.
